Prosthetic Feedback is an interactive installation that reflects on the transumanist human-technology relation as an inherent extension of the collective and individual being, where the guest-participant is expanded in space and time, using the present elements as a token for conscientization of the technological and interactive matter.

By creating an environment manipulated through real-time visual and sonic amplification, the device generates a continuous feedback loop system between spectators and exhibition space, as an extrapolation and extension of the individual—the subject produces consequences in the space, and the space produces consequences in the subject.

Without visitors, Prosthetic Feedback remains as a generative entity, being experienced only when the subject frees themselves from their performative condition within the installation.
